The Two Oaths

Jesus is swearing by His Father, but in the direction of two unknown men. He holds up one hand for each man.

Another word for "oath" is "pact" or "covenant." Together, Jesus and the two men represent the two parts of the New Covenant, which first was made with Abraham for those who would die looking to the coming Redeemer before His death on the cross, and later was confirmed to the 12 apostles at the Last Supper for all who would believe in the Redeemer who had already come.

Thus it is legitimate to represent the two men with the number of the Covenant, TWELVE, and Jesus with SEVEN.

Another Preliminary Consideration...

The clockwork is made from 7 stars, and the 24 elders are the hours of the heavenly day. At each full hour, a clock hand (7) would point to one elder (24), so one full day could be expressed by a calculation like $7 \times 24 = 168$.

And there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.

On September 13, 2005, representatives of various churches, explicitly including Seventh-day Adventists, participated in the communiqué “A Call to Partnership,” which was presented to the United Nations. In it, the participating churches committed themselves to cooperation with governments, international organizations, and civil society in order to implement the UN Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

https://digitalarchives.episcopalarchives.org/cgi-bin/ENS/ENSpress_release.pl?pr_number=091305-4-A&utm_source=chatgpt.com

An Adventist report from 2006 explicitly states in retrospect that, together with other Christian churches, Adventists entered into an “intentional partnership” in 2005 to combat poverty, malaria, gender inequality, HIV/AIDS, and other problems. This commitment was set out in “A Call to Partnership” and was presented to UN representatives on September 13, 2005.

https://interamerica.org/2006/11/world-church-faith-communities-could-be-more-involved-at-un-says-adventist-leader/?utm_source=chatgpt.com

It becomes even clearer in the General Conference’s official four-year report to the UN for 2005–2008. In it, the General Conference itself states that its “values and principles” are expressed in activities that parallel “United Nations goals,” including health, education, humanitarian aid, women’s issues, child development, religious freedom, and human rights. It also reports on its participation in UN human rights forums and in the Beijing+10 Conference in 2005, where it emphasized its commitment to areas of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action.

https://digitallibrary.un.org/naanna/record/682403/files/E_C.2_2010_2_Add.37-EN.pdf?registerDownload=1&version=1&withMetadata=0&withWatermark=0&utm_source=chatgpt.com

Already in January 2004, the world church had also established a permanent representation at the United Nations in Geneva. The report at the time explicitly described this as a historic development of the world church’s UN liaison office.

https://apd.media/archiv/2004/en.html?utm_source=chatgpt.com

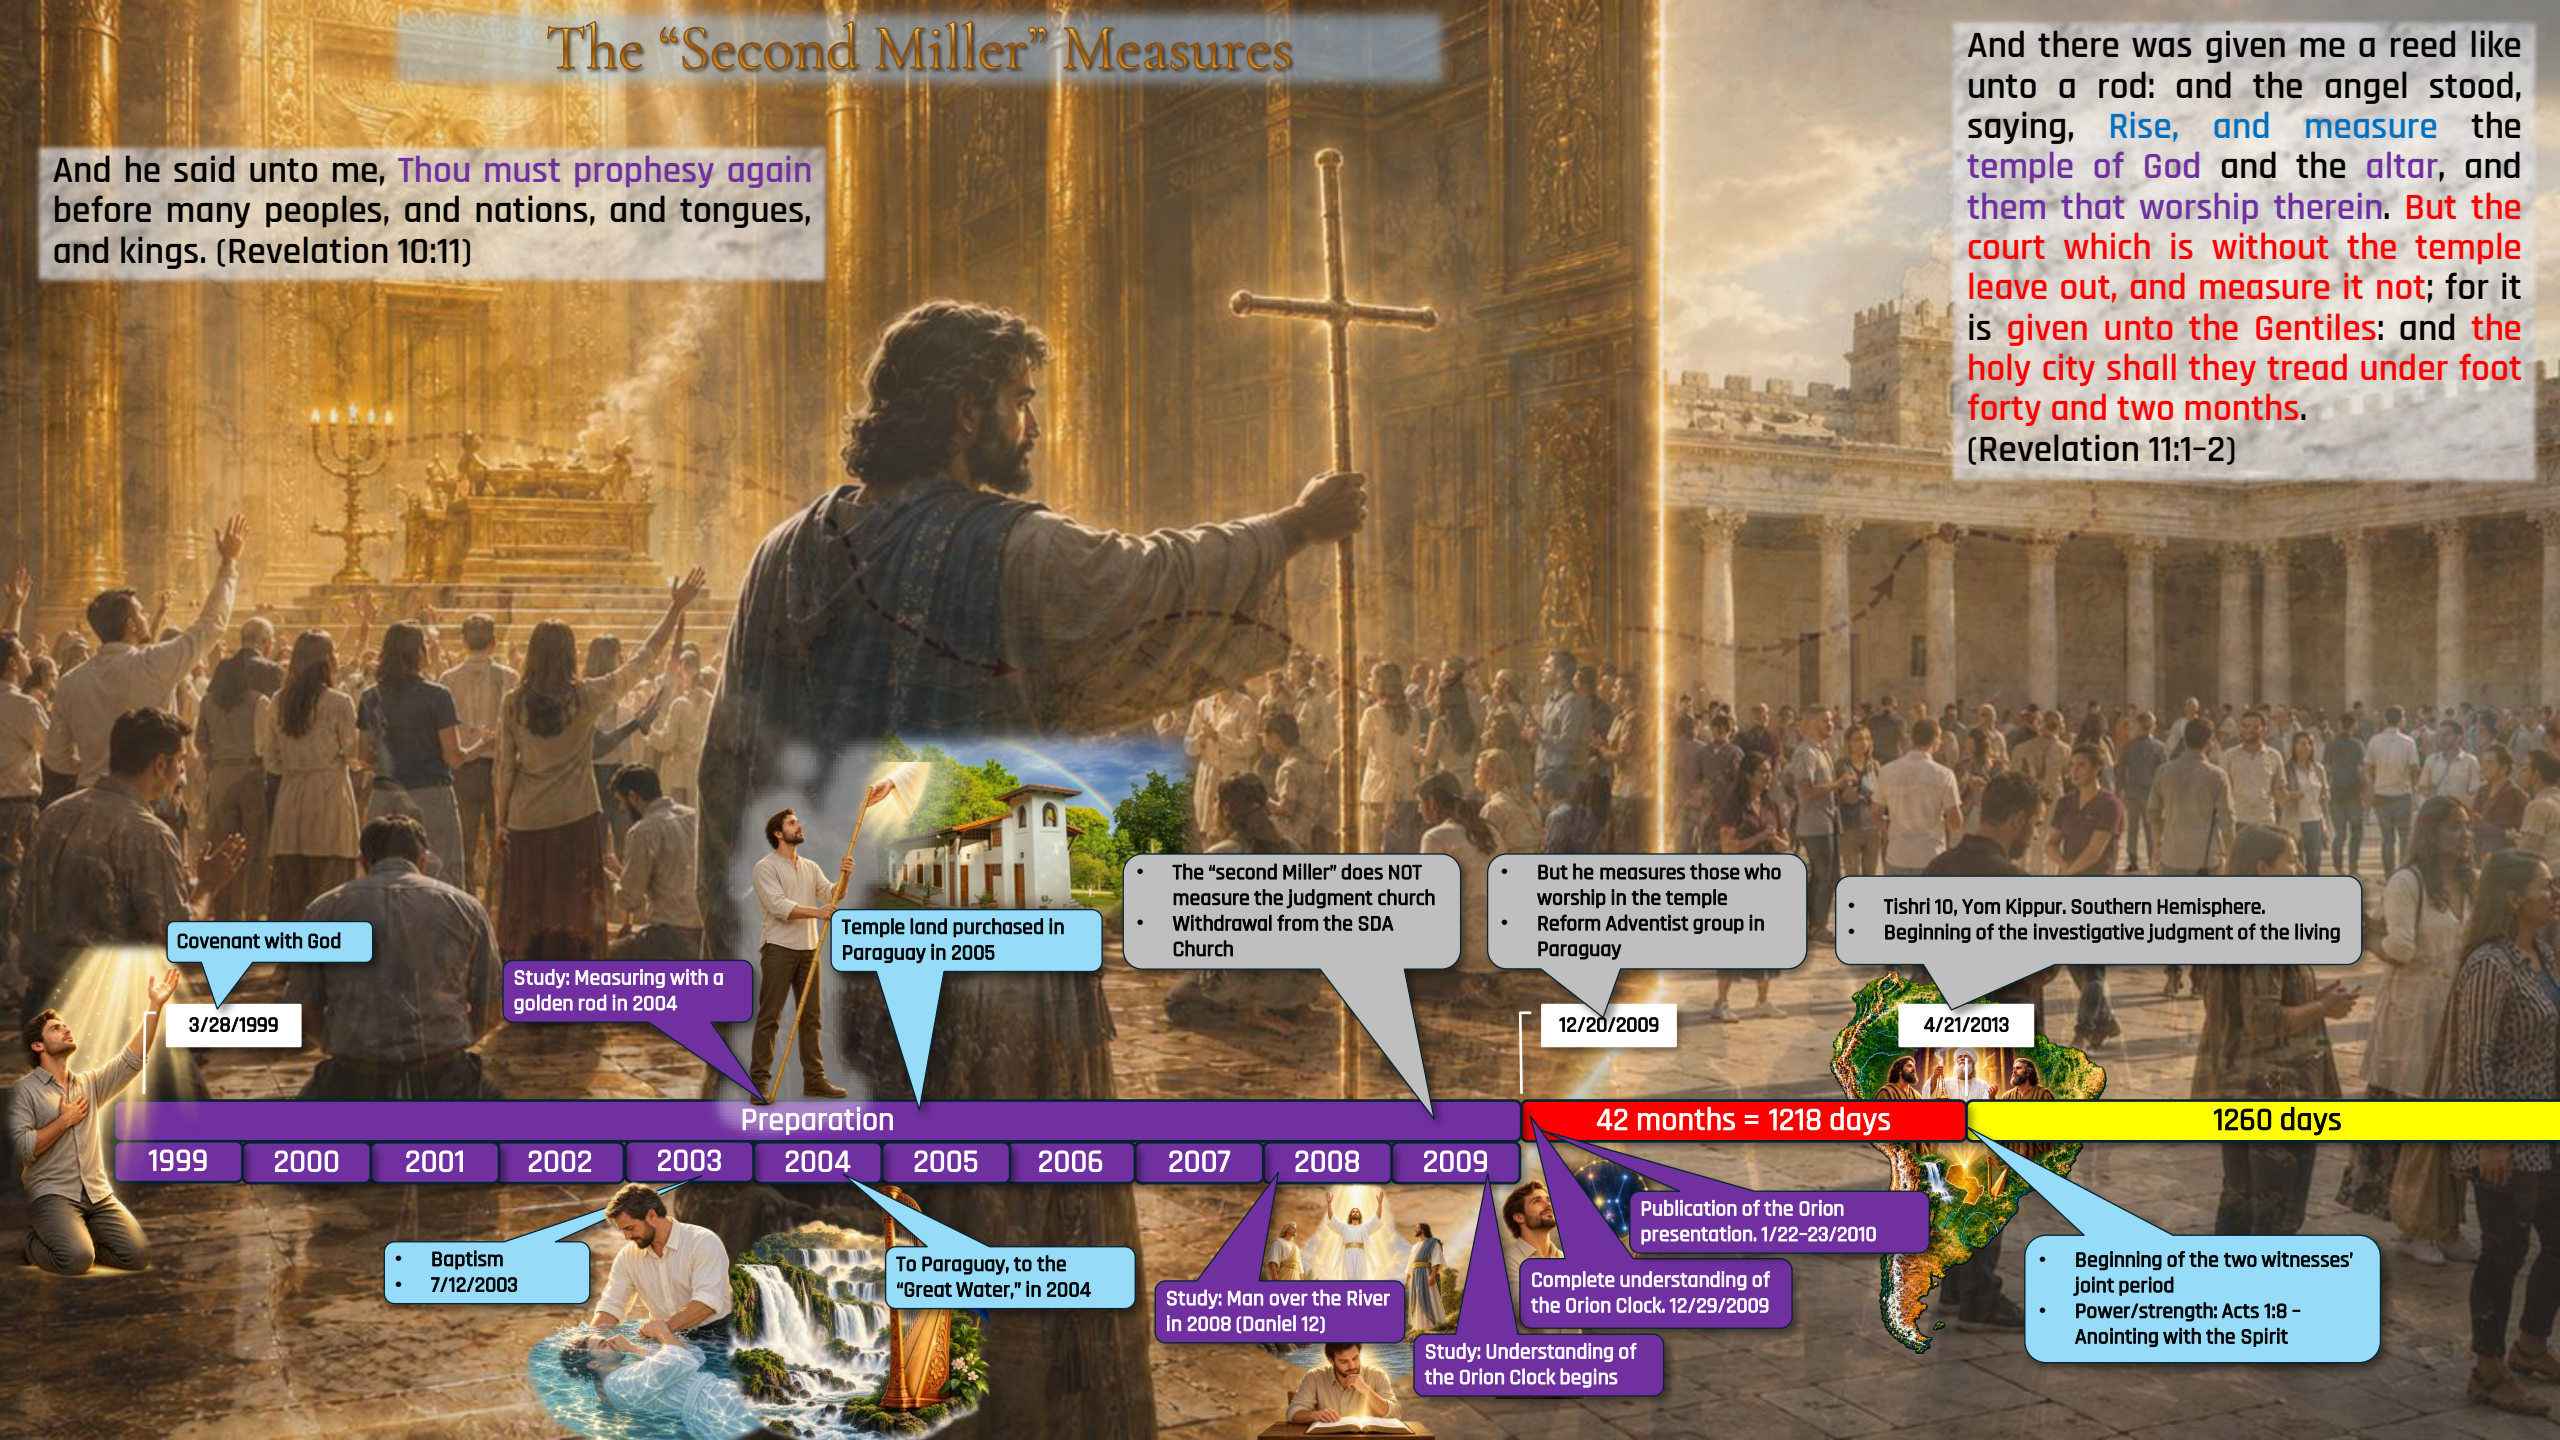

The most precise summary would therefore be:

“In September 2005, representatives of the worldwide Seventh-day Adventist Church, together with other churches, committed themselves to cooperation in implementing the UN Millennium Development Goals.”
